This really underscores how transing is a male attempt to recreate woman... the "neo-vagina" is a wound, a hole, that needs constant, painful penetration to remain usable.

I remember a professor explaining that during Shakespeare's time, the word "nothing" was slang for the female genitalia. The "neo-vagina" reminds me of that male concept of femaleness—that of emptiness, nothingness, fertile soil waiting for men to plant.

True story: 2 years ago when I was still finding my political identity I was in a socialist organization and they generously funded a trip to Chicago to a socialism conference.... they booked the hotel but I had to share a room and bed with others...

sasha white @iamGrushenka · Jan 22

I requested female roommates as I'm a woman. The reply was my room and bed assignment: 3 men I knew from the socialist org. The one I was supposed to share a bed with was a man. I later learned he now identifies as trans.

sasha white @iamGrushenka · Mar 4

You're right, women are different from one another and that's wonderful. The one thing that unites us is being women. That's also beautiful. Now while we're celebrating differences, can we also accept that gender non conforming men are men and that's ok?

I think that these marginalized men are hurting from the hatred and violence from other men who can't accept that men don't have to be masculine. The thing is, saying that their identity makes them female is also saying that not being masculine means you're not a real man.

I think the difference in the instances of gender non conformity that you point to is that they never really had this notion that the person could actually change their sex based on what they feel inside. Having a firm definition of "woman" is the foundation for feminism.

As ALL women are different, the one thing that unites us and makes us a class is the state of being female. That's the only criteria to be a real woman! A real woman could look, talk, act, think, etc any which way, but there is no female way of being besides being born female.

sasha white @iamGrushenka · Jun 10

Trans men don't seek acceptance from males because they fear female violence. Trans women on the other hand seek access to female spaces citing a fear of male violence. Ergo ipso males should accept transwomen.
